CITY IN BRIEF.

The Federal Jury has been discharged. The bond of the Treasurer of the School Board has not yet been filed.

Rev. D. L. Moody will arrive in the city from Richmond to-morrow morning.

The school apportionment of Hamilton County, $9,875.36, was drawn yesterday.

The coroner has decided that the death of Mrs. Anna Schaeffer was due to heart clot instead of poison.

On Tuesday Vice President Hendricks will leave for Washington via the Big Four and B. and O., in a special car.

Sumner Jones, residing at 430 North Mississippi street, fell and broke his arm at the Wigwam Ring yesterday morning.

The temperance meeting at Phillips's Hall this afternoon will be addressed by Mr. Bampton, an engineer on the Bee Line.

The Governor signed three bills yesterday—one to legalize the incorporation of the town of New Haven, Allen County, one to legalize the incorporation of Adams Montgomery County, and a third to abolish the City Treasurer and Assessor offices.

On Saturday evening, February 14, Rev. F. D. Bland, D. D., was stricken down with paralysis in his room, at the home of his son-in-law, W. C. Ferguson, 925 North Alabama street. Mr. Bland is conscious and able to recognize his friends at times, but unable to speak to anyone. He has for several weeks past been supplying the South

Street Baptist Church, having made his home with his daughter since the death of his wife last fall.

The ladies of California street M. E. Church will give an oyster supper Wednesday evening.

Cathcart, Clelland & Co. have the March Century. The recent army sketches have created a heavy demand for it.

A celebration of Washington's birthday will take place this evening at Turner's Hall, on Maryland street. Speeches and music will be the entertainment.

The Fire Department benefit at the Grand Opera house netted the boys $121. The No. 9's took the first prize, $15, the Hook and Ladder No. 1, the second prize, and No. 3's the third.

Some time ago the L. B. and W. paymaster gave a check for $2.50 to an employee named Kelly. The check was raised to $50.45 by Kelly or somebody else, and sold to William Husted, who presented it at a bank yesterday for payment, but the teller easily detected the fraud and refused to cash it.

The Indiana Medical College alumni will hold a meeting at the College lecture room Thursday at 10 o'clock. Professor Wright will deliver the address in behalf of the faculty, and this will be followed by the regular exercises, addresses, etc. The graduation exercises will be held at the Grand Opera House in the afternoon.

The Encaveatic Tile Works to be Sold.—The Record of the Courts.

The replevin suit of Thomas Wren vs. F. P. Deboit et al., was dismissed by agreement yesterday in Room 1.

Margaret Southern was granted a divorce from George Wren yesterday, by Judge Walker, on proof of abandonment.

Judge Walker yesterday granted a divorce to Maggie A. Jackson from George W. Jackson, on proof of abandonment. The divorce was entered in the decree.

Judge Ayers heard part of the evidence in the divorce of Mary Bly vs. Julia Bly, yesterday, and has taken it under advisement until next Saturday to give plaintiff time to introduce further evidence.

In the suit of the State ex rel. Attorney General Hord vs. The County Board of Marion County, a compromise was effected yesterday by which judgment was entered for the plaintiff for $1,187.54.

The First National Bank of Mauch Chunk, Pa., yesterday took judgment against the Encaveatic Tile Works for $5,339.55, on a note.

A meeting of the attorneys representing the creditors of the works was held in Room 3, and it was decided to be to the interests of all parties to sell the Tile Works.

The attorneys are to advise with their clients and report to the Court, after which a petition will be filed and an order granted for the sale of the property.

Lewis Wallace yesterday filed his complaint against the Farman heirs and others, to collect $4,000 and interest. The complaint sets out the death of Francis L. Farman, the probate of his will, the subsequent suits among the claimants, and the final judgment in favor of Sprague & Bartholomew for $4,000.

This was afterward assigned to Wallace. He alleges that the real estate in this city subject to execution is going to waste, and is neglected by the heirs, who have been collecting the rents and profits, and that part taken by the non-resident heirs has been removed from the State; that a large part of the property has been advertised for delinquent taxes; that the appraisal made on the property at the time of the levy made to satisfy the above judgment before it was removed to Wallace, was too high, and no purchaser could be found for it, and that if it, that a receiver should be ordered and that a Receiver for the rents and profits of the estate should be appointed by the Court, for which plaintiff asks.

A Strange Affair.

A man by the name of Frank Armstrong volunteered to break a mustang pony belonging to Fielding Beeler yesterday afternoon, and started out with the beast, hitched to a light buggy, about 3 o'clock. Armstrong did not return at the agreed time, and Mr. Beeler feeling almost certain that the vicious animal had run off with him notified the police. About 9 o'clock last evening Patrolman Bruce found the mustang and buggy on Spain avenue, the seat being broken, while Armstrong's hat was in the vehicle. Search was made for the man, but he could not be found.

TRICKS IN TRADE.

As Exemplified in the Adulterations in Food and Drugs.

Lecture Before the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons by Dr. Earp—Some Interesting Statements.

The regular session of the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons closed yesterday for the present year. The last lecture was delivered by Dr. Earp, who departed from the old-time custom of farewells and discussed the adulteration and impurities of drugs and foods with which the students may expect to meet in practice. Dr. Earp said:

The instruction upon the effect of poisons and the method of their detection that you young gentlemen have received to-day will be of great value to you in your future practice. During the remainder of the hour I will not follow the routine of ancient book-prints that are still visible but will depart from a rule that custom has sanctioned. To portray in pathetic language a patient swooning with fearful eyes, might be termed a sweet morsel of silliness, and will not enable you to restore the sick to health or furnish you with a crust of bread when hunger is well nigh your work has been well done.

The effect of certain medicinal agents will at times render disappointment, which in part may be due to adulterations and impurities. The love of money has been the cause of adulterating a valuable therapeutic agent, cod liver oil, by oil of a cheaper variety as cotton seed oil, seal oil and olive oil, and it has been stated that some foreign cods have manufactured an article which produces an odor and color resembling the Norwegian oil. The herrings can be dried and again placed upon the market.

Balsam copiva may contain cotton seed oil or castor oil and equal parts of the two. The olive oil has been known as "half and half" and sold for genuine olive oil.

Balsam of Peru has been adulterated by the fixed oils, all of which lower the density. There is supposed to be an adulteration from the fatty matter of rattlesnakes, and in this city orders are filled repeatedly in this manner. Lard oil and castor oil, in equal parts, with aniline to give a green color, are used.

Quinine owes its adulteration mainly to its alkaloids and salts. Light quinine encourages substitution by virtue of its alkaloids, and can not be easily detected by the laity.

Compound Syrup of Sassafras has been added to various fluid extracts when the original runs short in stock.

Bismuth, an ingredient of various cosmetics, may contain arsenic, and has frequently caused symptoms of arsenical poisoning.

Calomel may contain corrosive sublimate. It will be well for you to bear in mind that if you are administering calomel to a patient, salt food or other chlorides may perhaps be present, and chloride, corrosive sublimate. While again protochloride of mercury should not be given at the same time with iodide of potassium for fear of the double iodide.

The adulteration of wines is confined almost exclusively to the coloring and the flavoring. Wood and indigo, in addition to the natural coloring matters. Champagnes and Burgundies are mixed with those of a cheaper grade, and poor wine, by alcohol and coloring, may be transformed into the finer red wines.

Distilled spirits last evening I procured from a gentleman a copy of the labels upon three bottles, the contents of which had been recently used, and at the time contained a few drops of alcohol.

Read of a case of head low proof liquors. Holland—Out of one quart of alcohol three-fourths of one barrel, four ounces to forty gallons of spirits.

Saccharine Whisky—One pound will make about eighty gallons.

These may be rarely used, but to my knowledge they have been resorted to in some instances in this city.

In purchasing a stock for your office get the best, although it may be more expensive. It must be genuine or there could be no imitations. Beware of counterfeits.

Articles of diet intended as nutrients may produce a chain of symptoms resembling those of an infantile poison. The microscope may be unable to discover any diseased germs in a pork chop or a porter-house steak, yet if putrefaction has taken place it may give rise to a condition resembling typhoid fever. The animal itself may have been diseased, and as a result the consumer in some instances has been diseased in a similar manner.

After a family has eaten a hearty meal of game and poultry, symptoms of arsenic or strychnia poisoning may manifest themselves, which in some cases have been traced to the following: Grain had been immersed in solutions of these poisons for the purpose of killing mice, and were moistening grains and vegetables. The game fed upon this grain and afterward found its way into the market.

Copper occasionally finds its way into food in rather a peculiar manner. Cucumber pickles if kept in copper-lined vessels will become green, and when the salt brine has been thrown in the street as waste material cattle have been known to get the salt, and die.

Fish in close proximity to copper lined boats, or coppers have been used as food produced symptoms of copper poisoning.

Peroxide, the active principle of fishberry, has been mixed with dough and thrown into ash ponds. When the fish eat the mass it becomes stupid and float upon the surface of the water, and can be easily caught for the market.

Fishermen have used the fish for the purpose of poisoning violent symptoms of poisoning, followed by death.

Imitations of butter, known as oleomargarine, buttermilk and sene are made from tallow, animal fats, vegetable oils and lard, with material to keep it mixed with butter. These are cheap substitutes, if manufactured from pure ingredients, and not rancid, may be a food almost equal to the genuine butter.

In some cases where the cause of disease seems obscure, and the drugs administered result disastrous to your patient or, perhaps, injure your chemical knowledge may aid you in solving the mystery, and you will feel assured that the time consumed in the chemical laboratory has been well spent.

The examinations are to begin to-morrow, and Friday will be graduation day. The programme will be announced before the exercises occur.

Carnival Notes.

A floor has just been ordered for the Armory building. It is being made with a special view to use on the night of the ball. The building is 80 by 120 feet, and will be used in an entirety. When decorated it will make one of the most beautiful ball-rooms in the country, and will give some idea of the inaugural ball-rooms. The plan of the reception-room, cloak-rooms and ticket office will be at the west end of the building. The stage, 30 by 80, will be at the east end for use during the first three nights. All obstructions will be removed on the ball night.

Julius N. Fredericks, who accompanied the original Arctic exploring party, is now at the Signal Service office, and will allow the use of the gun carried by him during the entire time he was in the frigid zones, with which much of the game was secured that kept the party alive. Mr. Fredericks will mingle with the crowd every night, and allow various relics to be exhibited.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Howitt and Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Vinton are now co-operating with the Dance Committee and making many valuable suggestions. It is the intention to make the invitations plain, but the programmes are being especially designed in New York. They will be a work of art every one will desire to preserve.

Captain Jacob L. Bieler and Emil A. Metzner have taken charge of the decorations. These gentlemen have had large experience in this line and expect to make an artistic display.

It is thought General Sherman will accept the invitation sent him to visit the city during the Carnival and join in the festivities. The Committee on Refreshments will meet Tuesday, at 2 p. m., at the residence of Mrs. Major Robbins, No. 12 West North street. A full attendance is requested.
